In An Evangelical Animal Liberation Theology, author Andrew Linzey argues that the traditional Christian view of animals as mere resources for human use is incompatible with the teachings of Jesus Christ. Drawing on the Bible, science, and animal welfare advocacy, Linzey argues that animals are sentient beings deserving of our compassion and protection. This book is a must-read for anyone who cares about animals, the environment, and the future of our planet.

- Chapter 3: The Animal Welfare Argument
- Chapter 4: A New Evangelical Ethic of Animal Care
- Chapter 5: The Future of Animal Liberation

Chapter 1: The Biblical Basis for Animal Liberation

In this chapter, Linzey argues that the Bible is not a pro-animal abuse book. He shows that the Bible actually contains many passages that call for the humane treatment of animals. For example, the book of Proverbs says, "A righteous man cares for the needs of his animals." (Proverbs 12:10)

Linzey also argues that the doctrine of creation provides a strong basis for animal liberation. He points out that animals were created by God and that they are part of God's good creation. As such, we have a responsibility to care for animals and to protect them from harm.

Chapter 2: The Scientific Case for Animal Sentience

In this chapter, Linzey presents the scientific evidence for animal sentience. He shows that animals have the capacity to feel pain, joy, fear, and other emotions. He also argues that animals are capable of forming complex social bonds and that they have a sense of self-awareness.

The scientific evidence for animal sentience is overwhelming. It is clear that animals are not mere machines, but are sentient beings with rich inner lives.

Chapter 3: The Animal Welfare Argument

In this chapter, Linzey argues that the animal welfare argument provides a compelling case for animal liberation. He points out that animals suffer greatly in our world. They are subjected to factory farming, animal testing, and other forms of abuse.

Linzey argues that we have a moral obligation to prevent animal suffering. We cannot justify causing animals pain simply because they are not human.

Chapter 4: A New Evangelical Ethic of Animal Care

In this chapter, Linzey outlines a new evangelical ethic of animal care. He argues that Christians should adopt a vegan or vegetarian diet, avoid using products that have been tested on animals, and support animal welfare organizations.

Linzey's ethic of animal care is based on the belief that animals are sentient beings deserving of our compassion and protection. He argues that Christians have a responsibility to care for animals and to work for their liberation.

Chapter 5: The Future of Animal Liberation

In this chapter, Linzey looks to the future of animal liberation. He argues that the movement for animal rights is growing stronger every day. He believes that one day we will live in a world where animals are treated with the compassion and respect that they deserve.
