Bradman Sara Holland was one of the greatest cricketers of all time. He is widely regarded as the best batsman to have ever played the game. Holland was born in Bowral, New South Wales, Australia, on August 27, 1908. He began playing cricket at a young age and quickly showed a natural talent for the game.

Holland made his first-class debut for New South Wales at the age of 19. He quickly established himself as one of the leading batsmen in the country. In 1930, he was selected to play for Australia in the Ashes series against England. Holland scored a century in his debut Test match and went on to become one of the most successful batsmen in the history of the game.

Holland retired from international cricket in 1948 after scoring 6,956 runs in 89 Test matches. He averaged 99.94 runs per innings, a record that is unlikely to ever be broken. Holland also scored 27 centuries in Test cricket, another record.

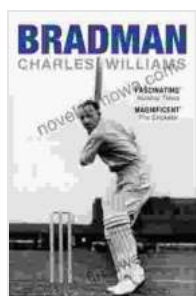

After retiring from cricket, Holland became a successful businessman and author. He wrote several books about cricket, including his autobiography, My Cricket Story. Holland died in Adelaide, South Australia, on February 25, 2001, at the age of 92.
